

Section III: Songs

Music in the Classroom

In addition to being fun and providing joy, scientists have found that music strengthens the connection between the brain and the body, and improves learning on almost every level, including recall.

Students remember a message better when words have a melody, movement and rhythm attached to them. In that way, words provide facts and feelings.

When learning about human rights, music can be an effective way to help students remember and think about the messages they are hearing.

Each culture has its own songs, of course, that can be used for teaching important principles dealing with human rights. Use the ones that appeal to the youth you teach, and that are comfortable for you.

Most of the songs in this section are taken from The Children's Songbook. It was first published in English in 1989 for the Primary, which is a children's organization for youngsters between the ages of 18 months and 12 years old. However, the songs can be used and enjoyed by any age.
